

Document A: Farewell Address

In 1989, after two terms in office, Ronald Reagan delivered this televised farewell speech to the American people. In it, Reagan explained what he saw as his legacy.

---

Well, back in 1980, when I was running for President, it was all so different. Some pundits said our programs would result in catastrophe. Our views on foreign affairs would cause war. Our plans for the economy would cause inflation to soar and bring about economic collapse. I even remember one highly respected economist saying, back in 1982, that “The engines of economic growth have shut down here, and they’re likely to stay that way for years to come.” Well, he and the other opinion leaders were wrong. The fact is, what they called “radical” was really “right.” What they called “dangerous” was just “desperately needed.” . . .

Common sense told us that when you put a big tax on something, the people will produce less of it. So, we cut the people's tax rates, and the people produced more than ever before. The economy bloomed like a plant that had been cut back and could now grow quicker and stronger. Our economic program brought about the longest peacetime expansion in our history: real family income up, the poverty rate down, entrepreneurship booming, and an explosion in research and new technology. We're exporting more than ever because American industry became more competitive and at the same time, we summoned the national will to knock down protectionist walls abroad instead of erecting them at home. . . .

I think we have stopped a lot of what needed stopping. And I hope we have once again reminded people that man is not free unless government is limited. There's a clear cause and effect here that is as neat and predictable as a law of physics: As government expands, liberty contracts.

Source: Ronald Reagan, Farewell Address, January 11, 1989.

Document B: Coretta Scott King

The following is an excerpt of a speech by Coretta Scott King, the widow of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. She delivered it in front of thousands of people assembled in Washington, D.C. to commemorate the 20th anniversary of the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom, where Dr. King delivered his I Have a Dream speech.

---

But even as we commemorate that great event, we commiserate in the approaching third anniversary of an administration out of touch with all but an elite group of Americans, an administration which has continually attempted and often succeeded in turning back the clock on advances of the last 20 years. . . .

Despite repeated denials from the president himself, [Reagan] administration cuts have been targeted to families of moderate and low income. . . . Half of American families—those with incomes of less than $20,000 a year—have suffered 70 percent of President Reagan's budget cuts. . . . many Americans are no better off today than they were four years ago because Reagan's "unfair policies" have curtailed their freedom.

[Reagan] has sown the seeds of a twisted notion that rich can get richer by making the poor poorer . . . and this is somehow good for America. . . . "As a man sows, so shall he reap." Ronald Reagan has sown poorly and he will reap poorly.

Source: Coretta Scott King, address during the 20th Anniversary of the March on Washington, August 28, 1983.

Document C: Representative Jack Kemp

Reagan's economic policy aimed to remedy the economic crisis of stagflation—high unemployment and high inflation. The following is an excerpt of a speech given by Republican Congressman Jack Kemp, co-director of the Congressional Joint Economic Committee, before Congress on March 9, 2000. Kemp was a strong ally of Reagan, and co-authored the Economic Recovery Tax Act in 1981.

---

In 1980, the US economy was in recession, the prime interest rate was 15 ½ percent, home mortgage interest rates were over 12 percent, the unemployment rate was over 7 percent—almost 40 percent for black teenagers—and inflation was running close to 14 percent a year. . . .

In a nutshell . . . the Reagan policy mix worked as advertised to slow the growth in the supply of money while increasing the demand for it. As a result, inflation collapsed, interest rates fell and economic growth revived. The great American job machine got underway. It was morning in America, and the prosperity that dawned in the 1980s continues on today. . . .

Reaganomics succeeded in defeating stagflation and winning lasting prosperity.

Source: Jack Kemp, Speech before the Congress, March 9, 2000.

Document D: Representative Ronald Dellums

The following excerpt is from an article written Ron Dellums, a Democratic Congressman from California. The article appeared in the newsletter of the National Association of Social Workers in September 1982.

---

Having just suffered through the grim reality of the second-greatest peace time budget deficit in U.S. history . . . the Reagan Administration now confronts the specter of imminent fiscal and social disaster. . . . Gone is the illusion of a balanced federal budget by fiscal year 1984. By the middle of May 1982, the Congressional Budget Office had estimated that . . . budget deficits would exceed $183 billion, $220 billion, and $240 billion for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985, respectively.

At the core of the fiscal problem is the growth of the military budget in recent years. . . . In short, [the Reagan Administration] proposes to spend more than $2.3 trillion . . . on the military in the next four years. This is more than was spent on the military in the first thirty years of the Cold War! When will this fiscal madness end?

In the context of the federal budget process, one person's greed is another person's privation. The fiscal appeasement of the Pentagon has been achieved at the expense of the poor and the powerless in society.

Source: Ron Dellums, "Reaganomics: Assault on human dignity and survival," Social Work, 1982.

Document E: Reagan Economic Data

This data was compiled by ProCon.org, an educational website. ProCon.org aims to be non-partisan, which means that they don't try to favor one political perspective over another. Reagan took office in 1981 and left office in 1989.

---

|                                     | 1981           | 1989           | Change |
|-------------------------------------|----------------|----------------|--------|
| Gross domestic product (GDP) | $3057 billion | $5400 billion | ↑ 77%  |
| National debt                | $995 billion  | $2868 billion | ↑ 188% |
| Maximum income tax rate      | 70%            | 28%            | ↓ 42%  |
| Percent living in poverty    | 14%            | 13%            | ↓ 1%   |
| Unemployment rate            | 7.6%           | 5.3%           | ↓ 2.3% |